This new edition of Policing in the 21st Century: Community Policing, written by Dr. Lee P. Brown, one of America’s most significant and respected law enforcement practitioners, has captured his thirty years of experiences in police work and authored Policing in the 21st Century: Community Policing. Written for students, members of the police community, academics, elected officials, and members of the public, this work comes from the perspective of an individual who devoted his life to law enforcement. Dr. Brown began his career as a beat policeman who through hard work, diligence and continued education became the senior law enforcement official in three of this nation’s largest cities. The book is about Community Policing, the policing style for America in the Twenty-First Century. It not only describes the concept in great detail, but it also illuminates how it evolved, and how it is being implemented in various communities throughout America. There is no other law enforcement official or academic who is as capable as Dr. Brown of masterfully presenting the concept of Community Policing, which he pioneered. As a philosopher, a political scientist, a social scientist, a criminal justice practitioner, he is the perfect person to write this book. The book is written from the perspective of someone whose peers identify as the “father” of Community Policing, and who personally implemented it in Police Departments under his command. It is a thoroughly amazing book that has been heralded as a “must read” for anyone who has an interest in law enforcement. Elected officials, academics, leaders in the criminal justice field, policy makers and members of the public will all find something of value in this book. It provides a clear overview of the history of community policing, the impact of new challenges and emerging issues. The book includes domestic security, disorderly youth, auto theft, prostitution, gang delinquency and crime in public housing. Developing policing practices that effectively respond to emerging public safety issues, such as crime, requires ongoing research and development. Case studies discuss the evidence and emerging lessons of contracting out. Good police officers are often promoted into supervisory positions with little or no training for what makes a good manager. Effective Police Supervision provides readers with an understanding of the group dynamics of organizations, the normative perspective on problem-based learning, and the management perspective on workplace learning.
