While many professional translators believe the ability to translate is a gift that one either has or does not have, Alison Beeley's Contradictions view this very differently. In her innovative book, she demonstrates how teachers can guide their students by showing them how insights from communication theory, discourse analysis, pragmatics, and semiotics can illuminate the translation process. This book is a guide for those who want to learn more about the process of translation. The way language is used and how it affects the reader is also explored. The book covers a wide range of topics, from the use of language in advertising to the translation of children's literature. It is a must-read for anyone interested in the field of translation.
